

Mantelrolle (Folding of the Overcoat)

The overcoat is laid, inside down, on the floor. The shoulder straps and the rear belt are unbuttoned. The tail vent is buttoned and the collar turned up. The coat is fanned out and the sleeves laid parallel to the edges.

The rounded bottom edge is folded up in order to create a straight edge.

The bottom corners are then folded in to form a squared off effect. The sleeves are brought out from underneath and folded so that the cuffs are even with the edges. (I experimented with this step to determine the exact amount to fold in the sides so the finished Mantelrolle, when strapped to the Tornister, would have the ends even with the bottom of the pack.)

The top collar end is now folded in to a point where the inside arm holes are visible.

The roll starts from the top by folding the coat over flat, the width of a hand. This continues until the roll is finished. Folding rather than rolling gives the proper effect.

Fold the Zeltbahn into 8ths (shown above) and lay it on top of the Mantelrolle before you attach the center strap. Attach the center strap, and then attach to the Tornister.
